Mapmaker's Bias

Do I always have to be neutral?

“Who am I?”

Who is the woman mapper?

“... men and women can have dramatically different relationships to particular resources.”

—Rocheleau, D.
Thomas-Slayter, B.
Edmunds, D., (1994)

Coleman, 2009

Women in Mapping: Throwback

- Early maps made by women in nunneries (Ende, 10th century)
- Women were banned in ships
- Women were not allowed to enter universities
- Map-making as a family business (~1500-1800)
- Women became engravers, colorists, lithographers, publishers

Women in Mapping: Today (literally)

- Form a tribe of 5-6 ladies to do the mapping exercise
- Choose a name of your tribe!
- [Adjective + City] example: Ferocious Tokyo, Creative Rio, Strong Berlin
- Mental Mapping: Draw a base map of your tribe's chosen area from memory.
- Use the sticky notes to pin on the map the places considered as important.

Caught in the Middle

A mother-and-child story
during Yolanda

*“When Yolanda struck, I had two toddlers:
1 and 2 year-old boys.”*

“Mercury [drugstore] was looted first.”

“You see, we swam in rushing waters that went up to the chest. We just carried the kids, and covered them in big towels.”

“My son who was sick pooped twice in the C130 and was crying the whole time.”

“Now with my third and having information so easily available, I am able to exclusively breastfeed. EBF for 1 year now, donating weekly for 10 months.”
